At-Home Learning Definitions

Synchronous learning: Synchronous instruction refers to remote instruction in which the instructor(s) and student(s) are in the same place at the same time for the purposes of lesson delivery and learning. Sessions will be held as scheduled, with consistent times across the district in order to provide designated times by level and address bandwidth concerns for families with multiple students enrolled.

Asynchronous learning: Asynchronous instruction refers to remote instruction where the instructor(s) creates a lesson which the student(s) can access on their own time, which may include but are not limited to: pencil paper, video, research, group work, etc. Students and families have flexibility to complete asynchronous learning at any time during the week. The daily schedule for students shown is offered as a sample of a daily structure to participate in and complete school work. It is important students have appropriate breaks as needed based on grade, age, and personal needs.

Office hours are scheduled daily. This time is provided for students who may need additional support in navigating asynchronous learning. Teachers are available for short individual and small group check-ins during the scheduled office hours. This time is also provided to ensure a consistent time that parents/families can reach teachers with questions or additional support. Elementary and middle school office hours occur at the end of the school day; high school office hours occur mid-day.
